I declare that I will obey all rules if selected as a competitor.

Furthermore, I am giving the competition a right to: without being obliged to pay any form of remuneration to either competitors or their managers, to Commission radio, television, video, and film recordings and/or images of all the performances. Produce and sell CDs, DVDs or videos of all the performances, either in part or in their entirety, or to commission third parties with the production and sale thereof. All winners including honorary mentions and special prizes (if asked by the organizing committee) must perform at the winners' recital on Sunday, March 15, 2026. Therefore, they are obliged to perform without any remuneration. If they refuse to perform, the competitor loses the right to use the title of the laureate of The XVII Chopin International Piano Competition in Hartford, CT. The contestants receiving prizes, honorary mentions, and special prizes, but not chosen to participate in the Winners Concert, are obliged to collect their prizes (including diplomas) during the Award Ceremony (held together with the Winners Concert). Contestants deciding not to appear will forfeit the right to use the title of the laureate of The XVII Chopin International Piano Competition in Hartford, CT. The organizing committee will not accept any absence from the winners' concert (health problems, communication delays, etc) under any conditions. Any diplomas, certificates, etc. cannot be sent or delivered in any other way by the organizing committee. All participants of the Chopin International Piano Competition receive free admission to the winners' concert.

It doesn't contain parents, teachers, and all other accompanying people, who pay an admission fee in the price of 25 USD. Prizes may be subject to tax, according to U.S. tax laws in effect at the time of the competition. Students of judges are allowed to participate in the competition, but may not be judged by the jury member who is a teacher of the contestant.
